Do you have these problems?

▼ Collecting financial information of portfolio stocks is time-consuming because they don't publish disclosures in English.

⇒ Our flash reports cover all stocks, allowing investors to check earnings summaries in English for any company.

▼ We want to invest in Japanese stocks, but we don't have enough information. We pay for information from multiple sources, but we still don't have enough information on small- and mid-cap stocks.

⇒ QUICK provides a one-stop service for all stocks. Our flash reports can help you discover superior stocks that you may not have noticed before because of a lack of information.

▼ We use Google Translate to translate Japanese disclosures one company at a time. But many companies announce results at once during earnings season, making this approach too time-consuming.

⇒ Our flash reports help investors eliminate the time spent on using machine translation to convert Japanese text into English manually.

User voices (prototype)

- Accessing reports and news on large-cap stocks is easy, but we didn't have enough information on small- and mid-cap stocks (such as regularly updated analyst reports and news). QUICK's flash reports are of consistent quality, and I've never had problems using them for work.
- QUICK's English flash reports are indispensable to operations at our fund. We used to use TDNet every day, but there was an enormous amount of "sorting work," and some information was overlooked. The flash reports help us to swiftly decide which disclosures need further investigation. We had an employee dedicated to this sorting work during the earnings season, but using flash reports has allowed the employee to take on other tasks.

QUICK's flash reports facilitate high-quality decisions

QUICK's services are highly regarded in Japan for reliability and accuracy. For the English flash reports, we focused on selecting and aggregating fresh insights that haven't been priced into markets yet faster than anywhere else. Foreign investors are often constrained by geographical and language barriers when investing in Japanese stocks. As your reliable partner, we confidently provide this tool to help you transcend those barriers.
